To the PRINTER,

SIR,

As I have little elſe to do, I often amuſe myſelf in reading old Magazines and News Papers: In an Engliſh Paper of the Year 1767, I found a Piece which I think contains ſome very proper Reflections and juſt reaſoning. I have tranſcribed it verbatim, and as I wiſh to ſee it communicated to the World I now enclоſe it. By giving it a place in your Paper you will oblige

A Friend and Cuſtomer,

CATO.

Say we read Lectures to you! SHAKESPEAR.

PRUDENCE no doubt holds a high Place in the Rank of Virtues; Parental Tenderneſs is amiable, and he who provides not for his Family is juſtly ſtiled worſe than an Infidel.

How far Prudence ſhould Girls to be
Women, and Boys to be Men Years before their Time, is a Queſtion worth tion.
How far that Parental Tender- commendable, which ſuffers Lads and laun to Scenes of Diſſipation, Pleaſure and Idleneſs, Time when they ſhould ſcarcely be known, and t to be employed in ſuch Occupations as may them valuable Members of Society; is a eſtion of Importance.

Nor ſhould the Propriety of that deſire of providing for our Families, which manifeſts itſelf in in bringing idle Boys and Girls together with an Eye to Matches, when their Thoughts ſhould be engaged by other Subjects, be taken for granted.

I am really ſorry to ſee in this great City, ſo many hopeful Youths ſpending and turning idle Coxcombs and Gamblers, and many little Ladies, who, if taken Care of, would prove fine Women, proſecuting Schemes of Conqueſt, practiſing the Arts of Coquetry, and talking of their Lovers and Flames, without a Bluſh. Such a whimſical Attachment between a Boy and a Girl laſt till they are in Circumſtances to maintain a Family, which is generally ſix or ſeven Years? There is not one Inſtance of it in a Hundred—Inſtead of making good Matches, I ſhould think this kind of Pr would ſpoil many good Ones.

Is it probable that a handſome thinks of a Miſs of his perſonal and perhap ental Accompliſhments, with kind Parents his Pockets with Money, preſs him like a Bridegroom, and who ſpends his time in Cock-fighting, Horſe-racing, dancing and gallanting, will prove an honeſt, induſtrious or learned Man? None but weak Minds can think ſo, and few ſenſible People, if they give themſelves Time to reflect, will ſuffer it.

Can we imagine that our Children, thus educated, when their Spirits become ſettled and their Finances low, when after having ſhared the we may leave them, and it difficult to gi

Bread to a numerous Family, will not condemn our Imprudence and cenſure our Indulgence. I am ſure they may with great Propriety apply to us the Lines of Phillips.

"They taught us indeed to cloath, to dwell in Houſes,
"To feaſt, to ſleep on Down, to be profuſe, but alas!" &c.

NESTOR.

MR. HOLT,

If Love's a ſweet Paſſion, why does it Torment?

CAN you tell me the Reaſon of this, Sir! If you can't tell me—I'll tell you! But ſtay, you have no Intereſt in the Queſtion: So I'll ſpare myſelf the Pains—but to the Purpoſe. There are handſome Women in Circaſſia, but they are Slaves; and, likewiſe in New-York, but ſome of them take Liberties; and that's the Odds between them.—Now, to be plain—I am in Love with a matcheleſs fair One; and though I have not told her ſo, yet, I believe ſhe knows it notwithſtanding; for the Eyes you know can ſpeak—and fooliſh Bluſhes—Hums, and haws, tell Tales. In ſhort, ſhe often makes me ſpeak, and look like a Fool; and (tho' that may not be uncommon with me) yet, I am very much ſo when I meet her.

We uſed to be now and then a little ſocial; but now when I enter, ſhe ſneaks away from me, and never gives any other Anſwer to what I ſay, than yea, yea. and nay, nay.——I ſuppoſe ſhe is afraid, that from more than theſe, Evil might come. Now, Sir, is not all this a Pack of Nonſenſe?——If ſhe does not like me, ſhe ſhould wait till I aſk her, and then tell me ſo fairly, and have an End of it.—— And if ſhe does like me, I am ſure her behaving ſo ridiculouſly won't increaſe my Love for her. This queer Way of doing Buſineſs gives me Pain; and in my Caſe, is the Reaſon that Love, the ſweet Paſſion, torments. I'll be hanged, if I would not rather beſiege a Caſtle of which comes more Smoke and Flame than from the Doors and Windows of the Chimnies of Hell.—I mean to compare the matcheleſs fair One to though to be ſure, ſhe is as pretty as fallen, and as arch too; and as holar Eve—for ſhe is wondr Mr. Holt! Do adviſe her not to be than wiſe——to be honeſt, and may repent of it when it's too late; my Retreat may be Nothing yet, other to be led ſuch a wild Gooſe Chace; for my had rather be broke, than remain in ſuch Service.—No Man of Spirit can bear it.——I ſwear, ſuch Buſh-fighting is not the Plan. Thank God, there are Women enough in this Town—and if One won't—another will.

JOHN QUICK.

LONDON, October 29.

TUESDAY laſt a ſevere battle was fought in St. George's Fields, between a coachman and a carman, which laſted upwards of fifty minutes, when the former beat his antagoniſt ſo that he died as he was carried to the hoſpital; and this morning the coachman died, who had his jaw bone broken in two places, his fore teeth knocked out, and one of his ribs broken.

Extract of a letter from Capt. James Wilder, of the Diligence brig, dated at James Town, in Virginia, Auguſt 19.

"In the month of March laſt a ſcheme was propoſed by ſome merchants, to fit out a veſſel in order to attempt the long wiſhed for diſcovery of the north weſt paſſage. A fine large brig was bought, called the diligence; accordingly, on the 4th of April we ſailed on our intended voyage, and on the 30th entered Hudſon's Bay; we ſailed up as far as Churchill river, where we took on board ſome brandy and tobacco.

"On the 5th of May, I ſaw a headland bearing W. N. in the lat. of 36 deg. 20 m. I made a trial of the tides, and found them to run two miles an hour; ſo in with the land, which I believe was the flood. We continued our course with much dificulty till we made Cape Dobbs when we entered Wager River. Here we sailed for four days till we made Cape Hope, where a strong current setting in, we were all in hopes that we were now in the desired passage, but after bearing to the N. and by W. for two days longer, we found to our disappointment that we were in a spacious bay, as we could now find neither ebb nor flood, and very deep water all along the shore.

"we now imagined that we had overshot the Strait, but, after seven days fruitless efforts to find it out, we were obliged to abandon the enterprise, sensible that there is a passage by the increase of the tides; but it is, in my opinion, almost always frozen up, and generally impassable. Pursuant thereto, on the 16th we set off on our return, and after encountering many difficulties, arrived safe here on the 29th of July, having sailed as high as 69 deg. 11 min."

Oct. 21. Monday about twenty five minutes after two o'clock, was launched from a slip at Chatham dock, in the Medway, the Prince George, a ninety gun ship, supposed to be as complete a vessel as ever was built in this kingdom, and went out of the slip with as much credit to the builder, attended by the huzzas of many thousand spectators, with a vast number of people on board, and several pieces of music in the galleries; as soon as she came into the water, she was saluted with several pieces of cannon from the ships in the river, which was returned by the military in the barracks, and the firing continued for near an hour. There were two large stands erected for the ladies, and principal spectators; that intended for the Royal Family was lined with green, but none of them were present; but the company in it were the French Ambassador and attendants, commissioner Proby, several Captains of the navy, and many principal gentlemen of the county; the other from the number of ladies who were in it, made a most brilliant appearance, and every feature expressed sensibly the most agreeable surprise, when this wonderful piece of art, this amazing structure, glided from before them in the Medway! The master builder, who had been indisposed, was brought to the water-side in a chair, and after the supports of the stern were hewn down, gave the signal for removing the dog-bars, which made a report like the distant sound of cannon, and in less than half a minute, the Prince George floated in about 17 feet of water in the river Medway.

The colours were hoisted on board every vessel in the river and shore; in the Prince George were the jacks in her head, next to that were the anchor and hope, in the centre the standard of England, in the mizen the union, and the ensign on the stern; the ornaments on her head are a Prince George in a shell, supported by two sea nymphs treading on a dolphin, with various other devices on the forecastle, which bespeak the different artists equally masters of their profession. She is built with three decks only; the length of her gun deck is one hundred and sixty-seven feet; her breadth forty-nine feet; her extreme length from head to stern, about two hundred feet; and her height from the forecastle to the keel about fifty-six feet. She is every way completely finished and ornamented, and has been on the stocks about six years; her complement is nine hundred men; and every true Britain must join in wishing her success. Her best bower anchor is eighty hundred weight, and the girt of her cable twenty three inches. Such is this wonderful piece of architecture, of which all description fails, and is one of those few human exertions of skill which we cannot sufficiently admire, especially when we consider its ultimate tendency—— is solely our Defence.

General Monckton is so bad in his health, that it is feared he will not be able to proceed on the voyage of the supervision.

On the news being brought to a great personage that Mr. Wilkes had lost his Mayoralty, it is said he replied, "Then I don't care who has it, now I am delivered from the sight of his odious person."

It is now plain, says a correspondent, that it is not the patriot, but the man, that is the object of our court persecution; for who can forget the very peculiar terms in which our present worshipful magistrate mentioned the mother of our Sovereign on the hustings? Whereas Mr. Wilkes is merely the imputed author of the printed scurrilities.

November 7. Thursday night last the famous Buckhorse, so well known for upwards of 40 years last past to the Nobility and Gentry of Newmarket, and other public places of resort, fell down dead in Covent Garden, where he was attending, as usual, with his link, to call coaches for the people coming out of the play house. This famous hero of the bruising stage, in his youth, used to divert the company before the champions mounted, with boxing any one who chose to attack him, in order to pass away the time. He was so very hardy that he could bear a great deal of drubbing, and often beat a much bigger and stronger boxer than himself. At last he had one of his eyes totally beat out, and of late years the poor wretch was greatly reduced, so as to carry small twine and walking sticks about for a livelihood, notwithstanding he was formerly so great a favourite with the late Lord Windsor, that he had him to sit for his picture in miniature, which he had set round with diamonds, and gave it to a noble Earl of his acquaintance.

Nov. 10. It is reported that a frigate is arrived at Portsmouth, express from the Mediterranean, with an account that one of his Majesty's ships, attempting to go into the harbour of Carthagena, was fired upon from the fort; and that the Captain of the English ship resolutely returned the fire, but was soon over-powered and obliged to strike.

Extract of a letter from the Hague, Nov. 1.

"Politicians of this place are busily employed in speculations on the affairs of Poland, and those of Russia and Turkey. Applications have been made here to the States-General by the King and nobility of Poland, to assist them in opposing the powers who have so tyrannically seized upon the Polish kingdom; but all treaties of that kind the States have absolutely declined, said to be on account of some prior treaties with the courts of Berlin, Petersburgh, and Vienna. This refusal will certainly give the finishing stroke to the power of his Polish Majesty, as he has no other court to hope any assistance from but that of Great Britain, who knows her own interest too well to endanger her German dominions by entering upon a scheme of knight-errantry to succour the distressed. The opinions concerning the new congress are various, but many imagine it is only a scheme of the Turks to gain time."

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 15.

Extract of a letter from Chester, November 10.

"On Thursday night last, the 5th instant, the inhabitants of this city were thrown into the utmost consternation by an instantaneous shock, supposed at first to have been occasioned by the violence of an earthquake, as the houses in every quarter of the town were shook to their foundations. Vast multitudes, overwhelmed with surprise, immediately rushed into the streets and lanes, not knowing where to fly for safety, fearful of consequences which the imagination depicted as big with every danger and distress. It was not long, however, before the real cause was known; and a scene of such complicated Misery presented itself that can hardly be exceeded by any instance recorded in history. The preceding day a quantity of gunpowder, upwards of eight hundred pounds weight, had been deposited in a ware-house in Watergate street, under a building, known by the name of Eaton's Room, in which one Williams, the master of a Puppet show, had for some time past exhibited his performances. The company which these idle amusements had drawn together on the fatal evening was very great (may such another evening never be known any where) and in the midst of their merriment, the powder, by what accident is not known, took fire, and in a moment most of the unhappy people were buried under a prodigious heap of ruins; some were thrown into the neighbouring courts, scorched, contused, few, but very few, had the good fortune to escape with no other hurt than a slight burn, or a little scratch. The numbers that flocked from all parts to view the place, where destruction had so suddenly fallen upon the heads of many of their fellow creatures, stood amazed at the display of so much horror; but the groans and shrieks of the yet alive miserable sufferers, soon awaked their humanity, every hand then lent a willing assistance; vast heaps of stone and timber were immediately removed, and the bodies that had any remains of life in them, as fast as they were raised from the ruins, were carefully conveyed to their friends in the remote parts of the city, or to that noble, that public establishment, the general Infirmary, where the Physicians and Surgeons, uninfluenced by any other motive than the public good, [illegible] contributed, by their knowledge and [illegible] in their several departments, to promote the design of so excellent a charity, stood ready to afford every possible relief to the miserable objects that were presented to them. It is impossible to come at the knowledge of the exact number of those who shared in this shocking calamity; the account on which we can most depend is, that the killed, and those since dead, amount to 23; and those that were much burnt, contusions, or broken limbs, to 80, most of which are likely to recover. Williams himself, his wife, and three or four of the [illegible] family, are of the number of the dead. Several promising youths are alike lost to their parents and the community, but how many heads of families have fallen undistinguished, we must leave to the prying eye, and the relieving hand of charity, to find out; and we doubt not but her benign influence once exerted, will quickly penetrate the most retired recesses of the wretched, and wipe away the tears of the mourning widow, and the weeping orphan."

ST. GEORGE's, (in Grenada) October 24.

A few days ago died here, James Forthon, Esq; in the 127th year of his age. He was born at Bourdeaux in 1645, arrived in the West Indies in 1694, married at St. Kitts and removed from thence to Martinico, where he remained 30 years and has resided 48 years in this island. He retained his eye-sight to his 117th year, and enjoyed good health and a cheerful disposition till within a few days of his death. He was undoubtedly the oldest man that ever died in the West Indies; and, had he resided in a climate more favourable to longevity, he might in all probability, have attained the age of the famous Jenkins or Par, the former of whom lived 169 years and the latter a century and a half.

PORTSMOUTH, January 8.

We hear from Piermont, that on the 24th of December last, as Simeon Rout and one Welch were digging in a well there; after they had dug about 16 feet, made a scaffold within eight feet of the top, one being below, and the other on the scaffold, when the earth suddenly burst in, and buried them both. One was taken out dead in a few minutes after, the other next morning; Simeon Rout of that town has left a wife and eight small children; Welch came from Canada, a well-digger by trade.

BOSTON, January 18.

Monday last the Hon. Admiral Montague sat out by land from hence for Rhode Island, and on Wednesday he arrived there, when the blue flag was hoisted on board the Mercury, under the discharge of the cannon of that and the other ships of War lying there—No salute was paid by the colony fort; at which neglect the Admiral signified his dislike to the Governor, who returned him a suitable answer.

"A mulatto fellow and a person from Smithfield who pretend to give evidence concerning the Gaspee schooner, we hear are confined in irons on board one of the King's Ships at Newport." Prov. Gaz.

On Monday the 21st of last month the following accident happened at Scarborough, at the house of Mr. William Hurmun, of that town, viz. as John Stone, Paul Thompson, and John Waterhouse, were about to assist him in butchering a large Hog; Waterhouse with an axe went into the pen and struck the hog on the head; Thompson enter'd with a knife in order to stick the hog, but the stroke with the axe not being effectual, the hog rose, ran between Thompson's legs and brought him against one corner of the pen, where in order to secure himself, he placed his arm and hand in which he held the knife, over the side of the pen; Stone unfortunately came to the place, and reaching over to seize the hog by the bristles received the knife into his bowels, which put a period to his life in less than 48 hours: He has left a poor widow, and seven small children.

NEWPORT, January 18.

We hear that Admiral Montagu has been pleased to appoint Doctor John Halliburton, of this town, surgeon of the hospital to be established within this colony, for the reception of the sick and infirm seamen belonging to such of his Majesty's ships as may be stationed here.

We hear that on Friday night as a boat, belonging to one of the men of war in this harbour, was going on board, the boat being very slippery, one of the men fell overboard and was drowned.

This 18th day of January, the Queen's birth day, * we hear, is to be celebrated by a Royal salute from the cannon at our fort, and from all the men of war in this harbour.

The General Assembly of this colony is adjourned to the first Wednesday in May next, then to meet in this town.

PHILADELPHIA, December 9.

Messieurs HALL and SELLERS.

On perusing the papers of a late Gentleman of this City, noted for his curious inquiries into the works of nature, I met with the letter I now inclose you; and as I thought it might be agreeable to many readers of your intelligent paper, I expect you will give it a place therein. As Mr. French, who wrote the letter, as well as several Gentlemen named therein, were persons of the first rank in New-Castle county, for credit and reputation, I presume there cannot be any doubt of the truth of the relation. I am yours, S. P.

DEAR SIR,

IT remains now to give an account of our wonderful tree. One Jonas Wright, a Carpenter, riding along the King's road, was surprised to observe rain plenteously to descend, when the sky was both fair and serene, and not so much as one cloud to be seen therein; but much more so when he found, that it fell no where else, save under a small black oak sapling, which stands at the corner of the fence of one Henry Land, on the land of John Grantham, deceased. After he had viewed the neighbouring trees, and found them as usual, and only the rain to descend from the sapling, he smothered the secret till he, and some of his acquaintance, took the opportunity of digging under it, expecting no less from such a discovery than a whole chest of money (a notion as fruitless as common here.) Nothing being found but earth and sand, he divulges the secret to his neighbours, who flocked thither to see so unusual a thing, and in a few days drew some hundreds thither, who were all convinced of the truth thereof, and reported the story variously.

Upon Monday, the 10th of this instant, the day being clear, and very hot, Mr. Yates, Mr. Hallywell, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Houston, Mr. Sweat, and Self, went thither, about mid day, to satisfy ourselves of the truth thereof, and indeed were wonderfully surprised to see, feel and taste, drops of perfect water, descending upon a sapling, about 19 inches round. Our curiosity led every of us to stand under it, and we all returned wet on both hands, face and clothes, with the drops, which fell under it. A boy was sent up to the top thereof, who, extending his arms above the highest boughs, received rain from the sky on his hands and face. I took my penknife and opened the bark, but nothing uncommon was to be seen there, nor indeed about it. It stands upon the road's side, being one of the marked trees of the road, in a dry sandy poor soil. From the time it began, or rather it was found, which was the third day of October, to the seventeenth (when it was cut down by a drunken villain) it never ceased, but rather increased in the nights. The wonder ceased with the tree; for after it was fallen, it was no more seen. It is upon a level ground, no spring near it. People's opinions, in relation thereto, are as different as on any other subject. For my own part, I must confess, I never was able to please myself, with any notion I could form thereof. The thing is unquestionable, being to a demonstration true; but what the cause thereof may be, or what it may portend, I leave to sounder judgments. And take leave to subscribe myself, Dear SIR,

Your most obedient humble servant,

New Castle County, JOHN FRENCH.

ALBANY, January 18.

On Saturday the 9th inst. departed this life, after a lingering illness, Cornelius Ten Broeck, Esq. of this city, merchant, in the 67th year of his age; a Gentleman much esteemed by his friends and greatly regreted by all those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance: His remains were decently interred on the Tuesday following, in the Dutch Church, attended by his relations and friends, and a great number of the inhabitants of this city.

The pleasure and advantages we have enjoyed, by the clemency of the weather and an uninterrupted intercourse with New York, by water, have been more than counterbalanced by the damage this city has sustained, by an almost total stagnation of trade; It being impossible for the farmers to bring their produce to market, or supply themselves with necessaries until the weather would admit of sleding. On the night of Thursday last the snow began to fall plentifully, and continued until Saturday morning: On Sunday several persons walked over the river upon the ice, opposite to this city; and this morning sleds are come in, from different parts of the country, loaded with wheat, peas, fire wood, &c. &c. Trade begins to revive, and business appears in the face of every man that we meet in the streets.

NEW-YORK, January 28.

On Tuesday the 19th Instant departed this Life after a short Illness, in the Thirty-third Year of her Age, Mrs. GERSIE WADDEL, Wife of WILLIAM WADDEL, of this City, Merchant, and Daughter of FRANCIS FILKIN, Esq;——Many are the sudden and affecting Incidents which daily happen in this Life, to awaken Reflection and assure us of the Uncertainty of all human Enjoyments: The untimely and much lamented Death of this truly deserving amiable Lady, affords us a striking Instance of the Truth of this Observation. Happy this Day we behold her, in the Enjoyment of Health and blooming Youth, surrounded with a rising promising Offspring, united to a fond affectionate Husband, and partaking of the Pleasures and Comforts of domestick Life in a great Degree; the next, she is suddenly snatch'd away, and like the Vapour that vanisheth, is seen no more. She was possessed of a most agreeable Disposition, and made one of the best of Wives.—As a Christian, she was pious and benevolent; as an Acquaintance, affable and friendly; and in short, her whole Conduct and Deportment thro' Life, in the different Capacities of Wife, Parent, Child, Mistress, Neighbour, Friend and Acquaintance, was such as endeared her to all who knew her. Her Remains were decently interred, on Thursday Evening, in the Family Vault, in Trinity Church-Yard.

On Wednesday the 4th of this Instant, a Boy between the Age of 14 and 15, named John Harvey, who had been afflicted with a Stone in the Bladder for upwards of Eight Years, was cut in the presence of several eminent Gentlemen of the Faculty, by Mr. Richard Bayley, Surgeon, of this City. The Stone extracted was of an irregular Oval Figure, two Inches in Length, and three in Circumference.

The Operation (tho' laborious and difficult) was performed with great Judgment and Dexterity, in so much that in the Space of 36 Hours after the Operation, the Urine began to pass partly through its natural Passage; and on the 11th Day, the Urine passed off so complete, that not one Drop has escaped through the Wound, so that he is now perfectly recovered.

At the Supreme Court held for the City and County of New-York, which ended last Saturday, the following Prisoners were tried, viz. John Thorp of this City, Blacksmith, for the Murder of his Wife, Elizabeth, and John Dailey, for robbing a Sloop belonging to Capt. Harris of New-London, who were found Guilty, and sentenced to be executed on Friday the 12th of February;——Thomas Rogers, and Thomas Smith, concerned with Dailey in the said Robbery, were found guilty of petit Larceny, and burnt in the Hand.——One Pell of North Barrington for passing a counterfeit five Shilling Bill, was acquitted; a Man for forging an Indorsement on a Bill of Exchange, was sentenced to stand one Hour in the Pillory, and then to receive 39 Lashes at the publick Whipping-Post; which Sentence was executed on Monday last.

John Burns, who was concerned with William Thompson, in committing a Robbery at the House of Mr. Samson Benson, at Harlem, was for the Want of Evidence from Rhode-Island (where he was taken up) committed to Gaol until next Term.

The Mail of [illegible] arrived at Virginia from Havre de Grace, [illegible] that the King of Prussia's taking Possession [illegible] of Dantzick had given great Umbrage to the Court of France, and that it was every Day expected War would be declared against that Monarch; which, in all Probability, will involve Europe in the same Calamity.

Yesterday the Sloop Polly, Capt. Periam, arrived here in 20 Days from Turk's Island, who on his Passage, the 14th Inst. in Lat. 33, Lon. 74, 30, spoke with a Brig——8 Weeks and 4 Days from Liverpool, bound to Charles-Town; and on the 17th, in Lat. [illegible]5, spoke a Schooner from Boston, bound to North Carolina.

On the Death of a LADY.

AS near her Grave in silent Grief we stood
And o'er her Coffin pour'd the pious Flood,
Whilst ev'ry Bosom heav'd the tender Sigh,
And plenteous Sorrow flow'd from ev'ry Eye,
Musing I said "why all this idle Woe?
Why mourn for her, who freed from Cares below,
Pities the Weakness of our well-meant Love,
And shares the Raptures of the Saints above?"
But when I thought on all her Actions past,
How each succeeding Day excell'd the last,
View'd the fair Series of her well-spent Life,
Each Debt discharg'd, of Mother, Friend and Wife;
(Her warm Benevolence her Hours endear'd,
Her Charity each drooping Object cheer'd)
Sorrow, I cried, should ev'ry Heart engross:
We trust she's blest; yet mourn the public Loss.

No more, my Soul, this tender Grief upbraid;
'Tis the soft Tribute to the Worthy paid.
Pour then, ye Friends, your Sorrow's o'er her Bier,
Your Grief is generous; for it flows sincere.
You show your Virtue in each Tear you shed;
Who knew her Living must lament her Dead.

We hear from New-Jersey, that on Friday Night last, the House of Mr. John Hyer, in Princeton, was entirely consumed by Fire, together with all the Furniture therein.

POET'S CORNER.

The GIFT, a SONG.

SAY cruel Iris, pretty Rake,
Dear mercenary Beauty!
What annual Offering shall I make,
Expressive of my Duty?
2. My Heart a Victim to thine Eyes,
Should I at once deliver,
Say, would the angry Fair one Prize
The Gift, who slights the giver?
3. A Bill, a Jewel Watch, or Toy,
My Rivals give——and let 'em;
If Gems, or Gold, impart a Joy,
I'll give them——when I get 'em.
4. I'll give—but not the full blown Rose,
Or Rose-bud, more in Fashion;
Such short-liv'd Offerings but disclose
A transitory Passion:
5. I'll give thee something yet unpaid,
Not less sincere than civil:
I'll give thee—Ah! to charming Maid,
I'll give thee——to the Devil.

LONDON, October 3.

AN Enemy to Deſpotiſm addreſſes the Livery of London in the following manner.—"The efforts of the public adminiſtration to enſlave the nation are not hid from the eyes of men who are free from Court influence: they are not, indeed, made with that ſort of impetuoſity uſed by the Stuarts*; but they are fatally ſure, as they are more artfully ſlow, and conducted by a favourite of equal cunning and influence. In this perilous ſituation of Britain, either the protracting or precipitating of its ruin will much depend on the ſpirit of oppoſition ſhewn to an enſlaving power, in the metropolis."

There are periods in which the ſtate of public affairs is ſo alarming, that it is a call upon every individual of the community to ſtand forth, and exert every nerve in the public ſervice. The preſent criſis ſeems to come under this deſcription. The people of England have, for a long time paſt, received repeated injuries and inſults from thoſe in whom the powers of government have been veſted. All their applications to the throne for redreſs have been neglected; and in a country in which the forms of a free conſtitution are preſerved, the inclinations, the complaints, and the intereſts of the people are wholly diſregarded. This is a ſtate of things which cannot long ſubſiſt. The people muſt recover their original importance, or expect to ſink into the ſame ignominious ſtate of ſervitude, that many of the other nations of Europe now groan under. But, ſurely, it was not to make the S—— independent of the people, or regardleſs of their privileges, complaints, and remonſtrances, that the Houſe of Stuart was driven from this country, and the Princes of the Houſe of Hanover exalted to the throne, at an immenſe expence of blood and treaſure!"

Genuine Copy of General Monckton's Letter to the Chairman of the India Company taken in ſhort-hand, at the laſt general Court.

"I have this day received a letter from the Secretary of the India Houſe, dated the 24th inſtant; informing me of the honour which the Court of Directors have done me, in electing me to be one of the Gentlemen whom they mean to recommend to the Proprietors, as one of the Commiſſioners to India.—I ſhould reckon myſelf deficient in my duty, if I omitted taking the firſt opportunity to teſtify my ſenſe of the obligation I lie under to you, and them, on this occaſion.—Some time ago I expreſſed my deſire to ſerve the Company in this capacity, and ſtill continue in the ſame mind; but as the letter I have received does not intimate who are the perſons the Direction have choſen to aſſociate with me, in their recommendation to this great and important truſt, I muſt beg to defer ſaying whether I will accept of the honour they have conferred on me; until the Proprietors at large have confirmed their recommendation of me: And what is ſtill more eſſential, have determined on who are to be my Colleagues in this commiſſion.

"I hope you, Sir, and the other Gentlemen in the Direction, will not conſider this little delay on my part to be improper. It proceeds from my feeling ſtrongly that the ſucceſs, in fulfilling your object, depends in a great meaſure on the choice of proper men. My own object has ever been to reap the ſame which would be acquired by a faithful diſcharge of one of the moſt important commiſſions, that has in any age been entruſted to ſubjects.—The pecuniary reward you beſtow on your Commiſſioners, though ample and alluring, was from the firſt offer of my ſervices, but a ſecondary conſideration with me; conſequently muſt have little influence in my determination, but I own, Sir, I ſhould feel a ſincere regret to be deprived of the opportunity I have long flattered myſelf with, of rendering eſſential ſervice to this kingdom, and to your Company.

I am, &c. E. M.

A brief and mechanical account from the Union of ſuch perſons as have exerciſed the trade and myſtery of Kingly government within this iſland.

"Scotch Jemmy, the preſumptive baſtard of an Italian Fidler, was born in Scotland: turning out a bonny lad, and of quick parts, he was put an apprentice in that kingdom, to the buſineſs of King Craft (on which he afterwards wrote a treatiſe and called it by that name); to this he gave part of his time there, and the remainder in England as a turn over: he dying,

"Charles his ſon ſucceeded him, but ambitiouſly graſping at too much buſineſs, proved unfortunate, and left the ſhop to his ſon; he made large additions to his father's work, by interweaving it with Prieſt Craft.

"Charles the ſecond, who was for ſome time kept out of poſſeſſion by Oliver Cromwell, who took the ſhop over his father's head, and who although not regularly bred, proved a moſt ſubtil, induſtrious, and able workman: Cromwell dying, this Charles came and opened ſhop, and carried on buſineſs but indifferently, owing, as it is ſaid, to bad company, being much addicted to lewd women, reveling with buffoons, jeſters, and ſtage players: he dying,

"Jemmy the ſecond, his brother, an apprentice, came on trial, but breaking his oath with his maſters, he forfeited his indentures, and ran away, and was tranſported for life; and although his ſon and his grandſon have endeavoured to follow the buſineſs abroad, they have as yet turned out but mere Pretenders: who was ſucceeded by one

"William, a Dutchman, who married before he embarked from Holland, and although ſome authors ſay, he did not wait for an invitation, yet as he had given ſome good will, he took the ſtock at a fair appraiſement, and ſet up on the old premiſes, where he and his wife got a comfortable livelihood: they dying,

"Ann, his wife's ſiſter, came in, in her own right, and carried on buſineſs with great reputation, while ſhe employed honeſt and experienced journeymen; but turning theſe away, her credit ſunk extremely towards the latter end of her time, through the blunders and miſmanagement of one H—l—y, her foreman, and ſome others: ſhe dying without iſſue, in whoſe wife the buſineſs, which was much extended by William the Dutchman, was left to the preſent family, the firſt of whom was

"George, and whom we ſhall call the Firſt, who was ſucceeded by his ſon,

"George the Second, who, with his father, were very good ſort of men, though both were much blamed for neglecting their buſineſs, by gadding to a dirty farm, called H——r, his nameſake and grandſon,

"The preſent poſſeſſor, began with a fair proſpect; but being over-ruled and miſguided by a favourite ſervant, has loſt great part of the buſineſs, and although ſome of his beſt friends have remonſtrated, and even petitioned him to alter his courſe, he turning a deaf ear to their advice, being obſtinate, has ſome time ſince quitted the old trade of King Craft, and turned Button maker."
